Meeting notes

We started off by carrying out an initial personality analysis for each of the group members, mainly to determine our strengths and weaknesses. The idea came from Gabryel, who thought that it might come in handy when facing members-related issues and also to assign the tasks in a more effective way.

The most common weakness reported was the fact that the majority of the group has little experience with APIs and JUnit testing. Which is why, we all agreed that we will do our best to learn more on these topics before we start coding the actual software.

After we acknowledged the various front-ends and their users, we produced an initial draft of the user stories for all the users mentioned in the coursework specification.
